THE MAKING OF A WOMAN: AN EXAMINATION OF THE MODERN COLLEGIATE FEMINIST

Eric Barnes and Rebecca Gearhart*
Anthropology Department, Illinois Wesleyan University

The culture of the modern collegiate feminist, as studied through interaction with members of the Feminist Majority Leadership Alliances (FMLA) on IWU's campus, is one that carries many perceived attributes and beliefs about what it means to be a "feminist." Through the use of photographs and collaborative ethnographic research methods, the research data presented in this poster presentation will illustrate what it means to be a college "feminist." This poster presentation will also examine the titles given to people who are "feminists" and asks viewers of the presentation to question what they believe a feminist to be.
